

Not a Shoebox

Master Suite, New Bedroom, Entryway & Porch Additions

About this project:

Wanting to remodel their existing home because of its location, a young couple with a growing family approached Ekocite Architecture. The problem the owners had was space and how their multi-story house looked. “We live in a shoebox,” they said. Adding to the challenge, the couple wanted a master suite for themselves. To do this, they would need to absorb precious space from another room.

Working with the couple, Ekocite designed a master suite by using an existing bedroom for space. To accommodate their family growth, the project also included a new bedroom addition to the back of the house. As for the exterior, Ekocite focused on the existing front door area, adding a covered porch with columns. Inside, the space around the front door was opened up, including removing the ceiling above and adding a new roofline, for a spacious open-air entryway.

Included in the project:

- Master suite with a master bath.
- New bedroom addition for a growing family.
- New entryway with an open-air ceiling for spaciousness.
- Covered porch, adding personality to the home.
